Collection of Information

- The app has the capability to collect and store locally to the phone, data from the external Vibratrac sensor (accelerometer), which can then be emailed by the end user through initialization of a new email in the phones default email application. The end user then fills in the “to” address to transmit information to a source of their choice. We do not collect or store any personally identifiable information about you unless you voluntarily submit contact information to us, such as name, phone, email address, and mailing address by filling out a form or survey, registering your email address with us or emailing us. It does collect user data such as ‘phone type, os version, country of origin, language’ upon install which is sent to Google play and viewable in our developer portal. The Carrier VibraTrac app does not send any data to Carrier (unless initiated by a user through an email). The app can also take photos by opening the phones camera and submit them to carrier, again this stores the photo’s on the users device, then attaches them to an email which is pre-authored to Carrier’s service department. The user can then either change the email address, or send it on to the Carrier service department.
